

Privacy information

As of July 2018

Fortuna Life Insurance Limited (hereinafter Fortuna) is well aware of the value of your personal data. Here below we provide some information on how Fortuna processes your personal data and the rights you have.

Please note the following data protection policy.

Data controller

The controller of your data is
FORTUNA Life Insurance Limited
Städtle 35
9490 Vaduz
Liechtenstein

You can contact our data protection officer by email at privacy@fortuna.li or by post at the address above, addressing it to the attention of the "Data Protection Officer".

Purposes and legal basis of data processing

We comply with all relevant provisions of data protection law when processing your personal data. Here below we provide more detailed general information on how we process your data.

Your data is mainly processed to conclude and process contracts with you. If you apply for insurance coverage we need the information you provide to conclude the contract and estimate the risk we are taking on. If the insurance agreement is taken out, we process this data to implement the contractual relationship, e.g. to issue the policy and submit an invoice. We need information on a claim to be able to check whether an insured event occurred and how large the claim is. This may – where necessary – include information from third parties who have been appointed to investigate the claim (experts), who may be able to provide information (authorities, witnesses, etc.) or who are involved in providing a service in connection with the claim (workshops, craftsmen, doctors, hospitals). We may also use data about you from publicly available sources (internet sites, social media, etc.).

If data concerning health are essential to assess whether and on what conditions your insurance contract is to be concluded, we gather (subject to your consent) the data concerning health needed to assess the contract, which may include information and documents from examining or treating physicians, hospitals, other healthcare or medical institutions and social insurance entities.

We also process your personal data to produce insurance-specific statistics and analytical evaluations, in particular to meet regulatory requirements.

In addition, the processing of your personal data goes beyond the scope of actually performing the contract, enabling us to protect our own legitimate interests and those of third parties. This may be necessary (for example):

- to ensure IT security and operations and protect our employees and assets;
- to calculate credit and default risks;
- to manage the company and as part of restructuring and transactions;
- to enforce and fight legal claims, prevent and investigate criminal activities, especially data analysis to identify indications which might suggest insurance fraud and to prevent money laundering and the financing of terrorism.

In addition, we need your personal data to meet legal obligations such as supervisory requirements, retention obligations under commercial and tax law, or our duty as your insurance advisor.

If we wish to process your data for a purpose not listed above or on another legal basis, we will inform you when required.

As part of the business relationship you must provide the data needed to commence and process our contractual relationship or the data required by law. Without this data we are generally not able to conclude or pursue a contract with you.

Categories of recipients of personal data

Owing to the complexity of modern data processing, we sometimes have to use service providers and appoint them to process your data or give them access to it. Some of these service providers may be outside European Economic Area (EEA) or anywhere in the world, in particular wherever our Group has a branch. When we use service providers we always take care to ensure that the relevant data protection provisions and data security standards continue to be observed. When carrying out our business transactions it may be necessary to transfer your data within our insurance company or within our Group or to process it jointly.

Involvement of reinsurers

When insuring some risks, we work closely with our reinsurers, who support us in examining risks and benefit payments. This requires us to exchange with our reinsurers data about you and your insurance relationship. This exchange of data always only takes place for the purposes of jointly examining your insurance risk and benefit payments and in compliance with the Swiss Federal Law on Insurance Contracts.

Involvement of intermediaries

In insurance matters you are advised by intermediaries. For the purposes of providing their advisory service, the intermediary collects and processes the personal application, contractual and claims data required to process the contract. Fortuna also provides your intermediary with data about yourself and your insurance relationship, when the intermediary needs this to provide you with service and advice.

Forwarding data to supervisory authorities, courts and other third parties

Being an insurance company, we are subject to strict regulatory requirements and constant monitoring of the supervision authorities. We may have to disclose personal data of our policyholders/insured persons on request to authorities, courts, auditors, etc. as part of their legal duties. When examining your benefit payment we may also have to consult third parties such as physicians, healthcare institutions, experts, lawyers or companies appointed as loss adjusters or providers of credit information and transfer your personal data to them. In all cases we always ensure compliance with the legal basis.

Data processing within the Group

In order to ensure comprehensive insurance coverage, separate companies having their seat outside Liechtenstein borders provide some services for Fortuna. These may be specialised companies inside the Generali Group or cooperation partners of Fortuna. As part of the contractual relationship, Fortuna has to transfer data both within and outside the Group.

Transfer of data abroad to certain third countries

When data is transferred to a country that does not have an appropriate data protection regime, we ensure appropriate protection by using sufficient contractual warranties, specifically on the basis of the EU standard contractual clauses or binding corporate rules, or we rely on the derogation of consent, performance of the contract, exercise or enforcement of legal claims, overwhelming public interest, the fact that the data is public or that it is needed to protect the integrity of the data subject. You can obtain a copy of the contractual warranties from the contact addresses mentioned above, or you will be told where copies can be obtained. We reserve the right to blacken such copies for reasons of data protection or confidentiality.

Automated data processing

In order to deal with transactions as efficiently as possible, in some cases we use automated checking programmes which determine the insurance risk based on the information in your application, decide on whether a contract is concluded and, for example, set the amount of the premiums or your risk exclusions. In some areas, we also use such programmes to determine our obligation to pay benefits in the event of a claim. Depending on the transaction, this automated processing may also include special categories of personal data and/or sensitive personal data, including data concerning health. The checking parameters used in these programmes are based on actuarial empirical values and thus ensure that the standard used for assessment is objective.

Processing data of persons who have no insurance relationship with us

In order to establish an insurance relationship, it may be necessary to process data of people who are not contractual parties. For example, we process personal identification data (name and date of birth) of persons named as beneficiaries. This is necessary to be able to provide the agreed insurance benefit to the beneficiary if an insured event occurs.

When a contract provides insurance coverage for people other than the policyholder, we process their data too. We need this data to be able to arrange insurance coverage adapted to the personal circumstances of the insured person, and to be able to provide the agreed insurance benefit to the insured/beneficiary in the event a benefit is paid. If an insured event occurs, we process the data of third parties, e.g. the injured party, the person responsible for an accident, other people involved or witnesses. This data has to be processed to determine the facts in the case, as well as to assess whether an insurance benefit has to be paid, and if so how much. We also need this data to enforce legal rights (e.g. make compensation or recourse claims) or fight legal claims (e.g. defend against claims with no basis).

We also process personal data of any creditors, legal representatives, agents for service and other recipients of documents, plus – when relevant for performing the insurance contract – the personal data of experts and lawyers.

If we receive this data concerning third parties from you, we kindly ask you to notify them that we process their data, draw their attention to this data protection policy and if necessary obtain their consent before giving us the data. The rights of data subjects that are set out in this data protection policy also apply to such third parties.

Duration of data retention

We process and save your personal data for as long as it is required to perform our contractual and legal obligations, or for the purposes for which it is processed, for example for the duration of the entire business relationship (from initiation and processing to the end of the contract), and beyond that in line with the legal obligations concerning retention and documentation. Personal data may be retained for the period during which claims may be raised against our company (e.g. the limitation period) and where we are under a different obligation to do so, or our legitimate interests require it (e.g. for the purposes of evidence and documentation). Once your personal data is no longer needed for the listed purposes, it will be deleted.

Rights of data subjects

You can request information about the data held on you at the address given above. Subject to certain conditions, you can also request that your data is rectified or erased. You also have a right to restrict or oppose the processing of your data and a right to be given the data you have provided. If you have given us your consent to process the data you can withdraw this at any time with future effect.

If you have any questions, please contact us at the address mentioned above. Please always provide proof of your identity, for example by sending a scan of your identity card.

You have the right to file a complaint with the relevant data protection authority:
